The Mayors on Volunteering

When talking to Mayor Brian Hurn of the Barossa Council about the importance of volunteering, Mayor Hurn noted that volunteerism is an integral part of our local communities. Volunteers care about their community and the residents in it, willingly giving up endless amounts of time, effort and sometimes financial contribution in order to make our townships, community and world a better place. Mayor Hurn also commented on the large variety of sporting grounds, parks, town halls, etc, that volunteers look after. If it wasn't for their outstanding efforts and strong community spirit, our council rates would increase drastically, or we may have to forgo other council services. Mayor Hurn noted that in order to best support our volunteers, Council needs to recognise, support and encourage volunteers whenever the opportunity arises.

Mayor Bill O'Brien of the Light Regional Council too has high praises for and recognises the importance of volunteers in our region. Mayor O'Brien said that "Volunteers are the back bone of most successful communities; volunteering creates social inclusion among our communities. Some of the best infrastructure in our local townships have been built by our selfless volunteers, eg: the Kapunda Lions Club playground".

When asked about how councils can best support their volunteers, Mayor O'Brien mentioned the importance of councils being aware of the different volunteer groups in their region. There also needs to be a good understanding and strong communication between council and community organisations.

Mayor O'Brien has been involved with service clubs for the past 40 or so years; he hasn't lived in any community where he hasn't put in many hours willingly, building friendships that last a life time.

Mayor Hurn has thoroughly enjoyed volunteering for many organisations, including sporting clubs, a variety of different committees, and the CFS for the past 45 years.

Wheatfields Volunteers

Have you ever noticed how volunteers are modest and reluctant to talk about their achievements or the impact they have?

This was reinforced at our latest visit to Wheatfields in Freeling. Kerri-Anne Yates (Assistant Lifestyle Coordinator) had high praise for volunteer Alan Linke, who has given over thirty years of service volunteering for the aged care facility. "Alan is much loved by both staff and residents" Kerri-Anne said. When asked about his commitment, Alan shyly played down his work and quickly praised the work of others. Alan began volunteering at Wheatfields by visiting relatives; after time this extended to visiting and chatting with other residents. Alan then began assisting with daytrips for residents. The next step in Alan's volunteering contributions was to take charge of running the indoor bowls sessions. Still managing to find time, Alan then added bingo calling to his list of volunteer skills. Alan says his volunteering gives him someone to chat to, "I love to talk!" He also added, "If I can make someone happy, it makes me happy too." Alan is another 'quiet achiever' whose praises we need to sing loud and clear.

While at Wheatfields we were pleased to find a young man who is actively involved and volunteers within his local community. Matthew Sandstrom has spent time during the summer holidays volunteering at the aged care facility. Matthew has been assisting Alan facilitating the indoor bowls and bingo. He is an accomplished pianist, and spends time each week entertaining the residents. Matthew also volunteers at Freeling Primary School. He says that he enjoys making contact with a variety of people in the community and insuring others are enjoying themselves and having a good time.

To Alan, Matthew and all volunteers, THANK YOU!

New VRC Coordinator

It's all official! The team at Volunteering Barossa and Light officially farewelled Jo Parker Phillips in October 2012. Jo has been appointed Co-ordinator for the Community Transport and Home Assist Program within The Barossa Council, so she will continue to be heavily involved with volunteers. Thanks Jo from the volunteer sector for your contribution during the past three years and we wish you well in your new challenge.

In October, the team welcomed Alex Johnson to the role of Volunteer Resource Centre Co-ordinator. Alex is originally from Papamoa, located in the North Island of New Zealand.

Relations in Kapunda drew Alex to our region and led her to study a Bachelor of Sport and Recreation Management at UniSA. A strong commitment to developing community spirit and the importance of volunteers in communities, attracted Alex to this position. Away from work, Alex lists going to the beach, Rugby ("the real game, not League") and travel, as major interests.

When asked what her main aims for Volunteering Barossa and Light are for 2013 Alex said, "To promote ourselves, set up a Volunteer of the Year Award, engage more volunteer organisations (particularly sporting groups) and provide relevant and accessible resources for local not-for-profit organisations".

The Cottage

The Cottage is a Christian Book and Gift Shop located in Nuriootpa. The cottage is run by manager Ruth Murton, alongside a diverse group of volunteers. The cottage has a friendly and inviting atmosphere and gives volunteers the opportunity to socialise, meet new people and create friendships. One of the long standing volunteers at the Cottage is Doris Reuter. Doris started volunteering at the Cottage when it first opened. Doris has had a range of different jobs since she started volunteering at the cottage, including working front of shop, in stock purchase and then on the management committee. We would like to thank Doris for all her hard work.
