All eyes on Angas Recreation Park

People are being asked to comment on a vision for the future use of Angas Recreation Park as a place of recreation, enjoyment and green open space for the whole community.

After several months of input by a community working group, The Barossa Council has released a draft masterplan for the Park and is asking for community feedback on the concepts, which include:

- Redeveloped clubrooms, function centre and spectator precinct
- Relocated or rebuilt Show Hall options
- Second junior oval/recreational green
- Landscaping and tree management
- Traffic management plan for a safer park
- More non-sporting spaces and activities

Community consultation will run until 23 October and people can make comment in a variety of ways, including at two community forums and at the Barossa Farmers Market.

Community Project Director Jo Thomas emphasised the plan is a draft only, and all public feedback will be considered before Council decides on a final version.

"We recognise the challenges of balancing the needs of a vast range of users, and this can potentially be quite emotional when priorities differ," Jo said.

"Our aim is to have a consultation process that takes account of all of these views so that the end result is respectful, shared use of the Park for future generations."
